WHO'S WHO in E&P A&D 2015

Without doubt, 2015 has been tough on A&D so far

Anyone who doubted that shale oil and gas assets are the real deal is slinking away by now. Even with 1,000 rigs mothballed in the U.S. since 2014, the U.S. is estimated to produce 800,000 more oil barrels per day in 2015.

The validation is rewarding. It's also hurting transactions. U.S. crude supply is up by nearly 80 million barrels since January. With so much supply, oil demand and price have plummeted.

Deals have flailed and many haven't passed the talking stage as buyers and sellers have been unable to agree on what assets are worth.

In the best of times, knowing the right person to reach out to for a deal is vital. In times like these, it can mean the difference between making a transaction or watching it fall apart.

This issue of the annual Who's Who in E&P A&D is a guidebook for you and your colleagues. It contains nearly 600 acquisition and divestiture professionals representing hundreds of companies. Inside are the people to talk to at companies such as BreitBurn Energy Partners, Hilcorp and Chevron.

Even in a down market, some major deals have changed the E&P landscape. Rosetta Resources was acquired by Noble Energy in a $3.9 billion deal that moves Rosetta's Permian and Eagle Ford acreage to Noble's side of the board. WPX Energy made a move in the Permian, buying RKI Exploration's assets there for $2.8 billion. And private company FourPoint Energy bought Chesapeake Energy's Anadarko Basin subsidiaries for $840 million.

But, overall, the first six months of 2015 saw U.S. E&Ps close $8.5 billion in deals, including leftovers from 2014. That's nearly $15 billion less than first-half 2014 transactions, according to A-DCenter.com.

Nevertheless, the start of the second half of the year showed promise, as July alone accounted for $5.4 billion in announced deals.

The Who's Who networking directory puts key A&D contacts' email address, asset focus and deal interests right in front of you. Those listed are among the most respected deal makers as compiled by editors at A&D Watch and Oil and Gas Investor.

The 2015 directory serves as a useful tool to quickly find A&D professionals. It contains the most up-to-date information available. Companies are listed alphabetically, and an index provides A-Z listings by name.

Please remember to stay in touch with A-DCenter.com and let us know if your information should change. Our online, searchable database is updated through the year and allows visitors to search a variety of criteria and see additional information, such as hobbies and more detailed backgrounds on those listed.

We hope 2015 brings you good fortune and great deals.

SELL OR SEEK CAPITAL? MACQUARIE SAYS NOW IS THE TIME TO ACT

Paid Advertorial

"There is a first-mover advantage right now."

s oil and gas producers' hedges continue to roll off, there are buyers ready to pay up for assets.

"There is so much money trying to move into oil and gas right now because investors see it as a low point in the price cycle," says Grant Butkus, Houston-based Co-Head of A&D, Macquarie Capital.

Many producing-asset owners are still reaping pre-2015 prices for some of their production, but these $80-plus hedges are expiring. Meanwhile, reserve-based lenders will re-examine clients' collateral this fall.

Sell now or wait? Butkus suggests that producers that anticipate stress in upcoming bank reviews consider selling now. "There is a limited supply of assets on the market. So there are three to four times as many prospective buyers looking at them and that many more bidding on them. Assets are selling for significantly more than one would expect at this commodity price."

As more producers are pushed into the net-seller column this fall and heading into the spring credit-line-determination season, prospective buyers will have more than enough to look at.

"There is a first-mover advantage right now. If you know you're going to divest assets in this market, divesting early—before that demand starts shrinking or supply catches up with it—allows you to capture some of those higher transaction metrics."

Futures

Butkus and his colleagues are more bearish than Street consensus on how long sub-$70 WTI will persist. Nicholas Gole, Senior Managing Director at Macquarie, says, "I think it will be the back half of 2016 when we will see it in the $70s. Others have it increasing above the current, forward strip toward the end of '15 and in early 2016."

"And we believe it will be a long time before we see it over $100 again."

Butkus adds, "Over-supply in 2009 was 200,000 barrels a day. Today, it's more than 1 million. It's a much bigger problem to overcome. It's going to take us much longer to work our way out of it."

Gas, oil assets

Financial buyers, including private-equity-backed operators, are the most aggressive bidders currently. Also active are firms—many of them based in Asia—that have contracted for upcoming U.S. LNG production and are looking to cover their gas-price exposure by owning physical, North American, producing reserves as a put.

Gole says, "We are working together with our infrastructure and midstream team on a number of large projects that should help boost domestic gas demand, mainly in the LNG and petrochemical sectors. These projects and their off-takers will be looking to take ownership of physical assets to help hedge their exposures."

Butkus says, "They're getting a much better understanding of the U.S. market. They tend to want to partner with a premier operator that is well known, so they feel secure with a deal financially."

Deals of this nature are more likely to go with non-PE-backed operators as private equity's five-year-ish harvest horizon conflicts with the LNG buyer's 10-year-plus goal of matching its LNG-offtake contracts with producing reserves, he and Gole say.

In addition to this competition for North American gas assets, there is financial-buyer demand for assets with marginal to uneconomic drilling opportunities that provide a call option on gas price. "You're effectively picking those up for free," Butkus says.

Amongst oily assets, interest in the Permian Basin has not waned, eliciting bids on a peracre basis this year with numbers similar to that of the first half of 2014. Gole notes, "It hasn't gotten any cheaper for core areas."

What to sell

After this fall, producers will have to look at parting with one or more crown jewels to remain right-side up, Butkus and Gole expect. Lenders' oil and gas portfolios took some cover in 2009 as regulators were scrutinizing all of the banking business globally at the time. "Now, energy portfolios are at the top of the list for regulators to look at," Gole says.

While financial buyers are loaded with dry powder, oil and gas producers are most advantaged in bidding. "They have lower costs of capital and they have operational synergies," Gole says.

Butkus adds, "They can look at it on a longer timeframe. A financial buyer has to make its return in six years; a strategic buyer can spread that return out beyond six years."

The team

Both are members of Macquarie's Oil and Gas team. Gole leads Macquarie's upstream investment banking business; Butkus is Co-head of the A&D group, Macquarie Tristone. They share a floor in One Allen Center. "We're Macquarie is a physical commodities trader, ranking No. 3 for natural gas in North America in terms of product volume.

"WE'RE VERY INTEGRATED, WHICH PUTS US AHEAD OF OUR COMPETITORS."

very integrated, which puts us ahead of our competitors," Gole says. "We have knowledge of what we're both working on and we get access to the technical capabilities of our A&D group."

Both groups have staff in Calgary and London as well. Their parent, Macquarie Group, has offices worldwide. In addition to representing producers in A&D, M&A and debt- and equity-capital raises, the firm is able to make direct investments via mezzanine, first-lien credit, equity purchases, joint ventures and other instruments. Also,

Better advice

Butkus says, "Having access to all of the different products of Macquarie allows us to give better advice. Sometimes there is another solution than selling assets. We can look at a much broader set of solutions, than if we're just looking through A&D glasses."

Gole says, "Some banks have no communication between the A&D team and the investment-banking team. We're very coordinated."

Bankruptcies so far this year have been among producers who would have struggled at $80-plus WTI. Open capital markets have given others a longer runway. "The next mile marker is the fall determination season and the guys who could have made it at $80 but can't today."

INTRODUCING

A NEW COMPONENT OF GEOWEB PORTAL

The Natural Gas Reports is now part of our web-mapping application, GeoWeb Portal. It allows users to access up to date and historical daily gas flow and capacity information, dating back to 2008, for more than 20,000 interconnections and over 130 pipelines and storage facilities in the U.S. Users of this application will now be able to create their own maps, reports and charts utilizing over 50 million data records.

Map interstate pipelines & storage facilities

Look up and chart gas flows, pipeline capacities & statistics

Research shipper contracts across all interstate pipelines
